

Mr.V's Guide To Texting Girls

Him: Why you texting my girl?!

Me: Why she replying...

I'll start off by saying that this is what I do, and what works for me, as well as the wings that I've shared this information with.

Texting is very personal. I can't teach you how to be witty or cheeky, but I'll do my best at giving you everything else. Or just steal my messages, why not?

Other nice guys may think much of this is "wrong" "too aggressive" "gamey" "childish" "over the top" etc.. Trust me, and the "nice guys" I've winged with, it's not, but it's normal to feel that way. Give it a shot, and adjust from there.

I'm grateful for the advice I've received by other coaches and players, and believe that this summation of my developed and learned strategy will be useful for you.

I'm going to treat this post like a live document, and will update as needed. If you have any questions, you know how to find me.

© Copyright 2020 MrV Daygame

1. High Level Guidelines

Texting is part and parcel of the modern dating process, and is unavoidable. Girls use texting as a gauge of your frame and if you're normal or not. For Daygame, 95% of the work is really done in-set. If she doesn't reply, or replies but won't come out, it likely isn't because of your texting.

These guidelines are what I follow in my texting, but sometimes situations are nuanced, so break where you think it's appropriate to.

IMPORTANT MESSAGE: Many guys will "Next" girls quickly when they are either being a little distant, giving short responses, etc. Don't be too quick to next, just be unaffected and proceed as normal. It could be a shit test.

A girl I dated started to behave like this after date 2. Had I “next” her too quickly, I wouldn’t have had two amazing years with her.

That said, know when it’s time to move on, with the guidelines below as your compass.

1.01 - EVERYTHING IS GOOD

Work is never stressful. I’m always doing amazing. I never complain. Don’t go into details about your life, leave a little mystery.

- Her: How’s your day going?
You: A bit stressful but I’ll get through. Hbu?

YAWN

- Her: How’s your day going?
You: Just ate some donuts for lunch. Dentists hate me ;)

Boom!

If you’re having a hard day, talk to one of your bro’s. She isn’t our mother, so don’t cry or stress about your problems to her.

It sounds harsh, I know, but it’s our burden as men to be strong. Woman will test our emotional strength by picking at our frame. The more she picks away, the less respect she will have for us.

This doesn’t mean you are pretending to be okay when you’re not. Just don’t harp on it. You could even brush it off smoothly like this:

- Her: How’s your day going?
You: Nothing a few beers can’t solve later ;)

1.02 - SEND STATEMENTS THAT DON’T REQUIRE REPLIES

Questions take value, statements add value, and in texting that feeling is amplified.

Look at any messages with girls you’ve texted. They ask very few questions. This is high value behavior, and it’s a great reference for mimicking.

So when a girl I’m texting asks me a question, the first thing that pops into my head is “She’s interested!”

I’ll keep to 3-5 messages each before sending a date invite. You don’t want to just be a fun text buddy.

I understand some of the girls we talk to are hot, and we REALLY want a reply from them, but by NOT asking questions, you’ll come across much stronger, and it will communicate a lot more about you and the strength of your frame.

Here are a few alternative messages that turn questions into statements

- DON'T: "What are you up to?"
DO: "You right now" (with a funny GIF)
- DON'T: "How's your trip going?"
DO: "I bet you're getting soo sunburnt right now"

There are times when a question MAY be unavoidable (though you could prob reword it as a statement.) If you DO need to ask a question, avoid punctuation as much as possible.

Just the sight of "?" makes me feel like someone wants to take something from me. I also avoid "!" because it's a bit too high energy. Game isn't about proper grammar, so don't be a nerd about it.

If the question you ask becomes a statement without the "?" re-word.

- "On the way there?"
"On the way there"

The other important piece of making your texts statements that don't require replies, is that IF she doesn't reply, sending a second text doesn't look stupid.

1.03 - PING TEXTING

This is simply about engaging a lead by sending a text, or image with a caption. I try to keep the pings relevant to what we talked about in person. If she told me she was going sailing soon, I'll send a GIF of a boat crash with "Think you need more lessons"

Ping's are rarely about you asking what she's up to. They're just you being a cool dude and sending something about what's going on with you during your day.

I often send pings if I haven't spoken to the girl in a couple days around 1pm. Not sure I have any scientific reason for it, but I like that it's post-lunch and just about to start working again (ie, I might not reply quickly)

You can send text pings, but I prefer to send pings with images, because they're more visual and less gamey. I also avoid stock images as Pings, and use photos I've taken. I'll send one ping image, and then text back and forth. If the convo dies, I'll send another ping a few days later.

Text Ping Examples - Again, I tend to avoid because they feel too gamey.

- "Just saw a dog with a newspaper in its mouth."
- "Just saw a cat on some dude's head."
(This happened in NY)
- "Nothing better on a day like today than some hot chocolate"

Here are some examples of real Ping images I've sent

Other ping texts that work well at night are short voice messages. Speak in a low and slow tone. They're pretty cool, and a nice mix. Give it a shot.

For leads that die out, after a couple weeks I'll send:

- "Just saw a girl wearing XYZ. Reminded me of you."
- "A girl here is talking about XYZ. Reminded me of you."
- "What mischief is Ms.XYZ up to 🐶🐶🐶"

NEVER reenage a lead by acknowledging that she didn't reply. You'll instantly lose your frame.

Avoid:

- "?"
- "So....?"
- "Does that work?"
- "Did u get kidnapped??"
- "Hello?"

This is weak. If she doesn't reply, wait a few days, and send another ping. No reply? Be gone thots. Who knows, girls are random, you might hear from her in a few months. It happens.

1.04 - LESS IS MORE

General rule of thumb is that my messages are 2 lines max. 3 on rare occasions. Sometimes it's not possible, and contrary to what many might say, I will double text, but only if it's immediate. 2 smaller messages back to back looks better than one big message. You could argue her seeing 2 messages in notifications from you looks thirsty, so decide how you want to proceed.

I often spend time editing down my messages. It's good practice to figure out how you can communicate the same information with less words. Especially when texting hotties.

1.05 - REPLY TIMES

Reply times are tricky. Feel it out. How long she replies + how enthusiastic her message is.

I follow this rough guideline

- Her: 5 Hour Reply
Me: 1 Hour Response
- Her: 1 Hour Reply
Me: 30 Min to 1 Hour Response
- Her: 5 Min Reply
Me: 5-20 Min Response

If we're going back and forth, i'll usually send messages within 10 minutes. I don't have any scientific formula for this, other than what feels right for me.

Now, let's say she replies an entire day later, don't reply ANOTHER day later. Just reply about 1-2 hours later. You don't want to fall TOO much on her texting reply frame.

The longer you reply, the better, usually, but don't be a robot. If a girl is engadged, it's ok to engage with her, as long as you have or are moving towards setting up the date plans.

And, if you or her are in the country/state/city for a very short time, I break these rules and usually reply in 10 minutes.

1.06 - NO MORE MR.NICE GUY / HAVE NO EMPATHY

Avoid language that indicates that you "care." This is classic nice guy behavior.

You don't know this girl, and even if you did you're not here to make her "feel better" over text like some beta orbiter emotional tampon.

Let's say she lies to you and you "empathize" with her, you look like a fucking loser, because she lied, and you're communicating you don't "get it."

- HER: "Sorry, I've just been so busy"
DON'T: "I understand. Life happens."
- HER: "Ughh my life is such a mess right now"
DON'T: "Oh, what happened?"
- DON'T: "I know you're busy, but..."
- DON'T: "I'm sorry to hear that"

It's gonna sound disappointing but if my life from the past 2 days was a
Netflix series, it would be canceled
after a pilot

7:15 PM

Then let's get a drink and make your life exciting

7:35 PM ✓✓

Also avoid language that lacks confidence

- "Btw, ..."
- "Oh, ..."
- "I forgot to tell you, ..."
- "So, ..."

- "Just remembered, ..."
- "Anyways, ..."

In a similar vein to the above, I never send "lol." It can come across as you trying to soften your statement. Either reword, remove it or include a cheeky emoji if appropriate.

I almost never compliment a girl over text, and I also almost never wish girls well. I rarely even wish them happy insert-holiday-here.

- DON'T: "Hope you have a good trip!"
DO: "Snapping turtle's gonna get ya"
- DON'T: "Enjoy your new years"
DO: "You better behave on new years ;)"
- DON'T: "Have fun with your friends"
DO: "Don't drunk text me at 2am when your friends ditch you ;)"

If you want to send a holiday message, do something cheeky.

- DON'T: "Merry Christmas!"
DO: "So, how much coal you get this year ;)"
- DON'T: "Happy New Year!"
DO: "I bet your new years resolution is XYZ... ;)"

Another key element in your replies, is that they should move the conversation forward. I typically avoid any agreeable type of language. It feels too soft.

- HER: "The weather is so nice out today"
DON'T: "Yeah, it really is"
DO: "Romance is in the air ;)"
- HER: "I ate some chicken for dinner"
DON'T: "That sounds tasty"
DO: "Shrimp > Chicken"

1.07 - 50 CHEEKY, 50% NORMAL

Texting should be 50% cheeky/cocky-funny, 50% normal.

- If you're too much of a clown and always making jokes, she won't take you seriously.
- If you're too normal, you'll be boring.

Texting is great because you can take a long time to reply. I used to spend hours editing messages. Practice by drafting a few variations in notes to see what feels best.

Don't worry; You won't lose by taking a little longer to reply.

1.08 - EMOJI'S & GIFS

Emoji

I love using emoji's when texting girls, but avoid over doing it. Emojis can convey emotion in a way words can't. I also like to keep to a very small selection of emoji's, but may throw an odd one in if it's relevant to the conversation.

My favorite emoji right now are: 😊, 🤪, 🙈, 😎

Emoji I never send: 🍆, 😳, 🤣

GIF's

I LOVE sending Gif's. They work really well as a push, or to make the conversation a bit more fun. This is all about being different and fun, even if the references aren't understood.

If she's sick, I'll send this GIF of Spongebob with the caption "U got the suds"

If she's lost, I'll send this with no caption

If she starts complaining, or trying to use me as an emotional tampon, I send this.

1.09 - SEXTING

Avoid sexting, or being too sexually suggestive with any girl UNTIL you've slept with her. Even then, I try to keep those kinds of messages to a minimum.

Guys are too thirsty and want to get sexual in texts, but by doing so you only create more pressure for her to feel like she has to put out, which will cause her to flake.

1.10 - AVOID FRAME BATTLES

Girls will often do this, and going back and forth trying to "one up" her is going to make you seem reactive. I typically give 1 or 2 replies that maintain my frame, and if she continues to battle it, i'll either not reply and ping her in a few days, or make fun of her/tell her she's cheeky, she's fired, etc.

Not every text she sends needs a reply. If she's challenging you on something, you can either talk about something else, or just ignore it and text her in a couple days.

1.11 - ONE TOPIC AT A TIME

Avoid bouncing the conversation from one topic to the next in every other message.

This is common for girls who have bad girl text game. She'll reply to your message about topic, then ask a question about something else. It's your job to choose one topic.

Here's what NOT to do:

- HER: "The show was really great. What was ur weekend like?"
- YOU: "Did you get up on stage and shake your little tush ;). This weekend I hung out with a giant ass dog"
- HER: "Ha, no security grabbed me first. What kind of dog?"
- YOU: "Explains why the show was soo good ;). A giant ass doxin"

Just choose one topic, either the show or the weekend, and stick to it. By having multiple threads, it's complicated and messy, and gets hard to manage.

What do do:

- HER: "The show was really great. What was ur weekend like?"
- YOU: "Did you get up on stage and shake your little tush ;)"
- HER: "Ha, no security grabbed me first. Was your weekend better?"
- YOU: "Explains why the show was soo good ;)"

1.12 - DON'T ANSWER LOGICALLY

When she asks you a question, it's often because she has bad girl game, and just wants you to reply. Don't fall into the trap of answering her logically. This will lead to a boring conversation, and it's your responsibility to prevent that.

- HER: "How was dinner with your friends?"
- DON'T: "Really good. Nice to catch up. Haven't seen them in a while."
- DO: "I ate the juiciest burger. Still have some pieces stuck in my beard ;)"

1.13 - GET HER OUT!

Avoid becoming a text buddy. I typically stick to between 3-5 messages from each of us before sending the date invite. Once the date invite is confirmed, I typically stop texting her until the day of.

1.14 - TEXTING SUB-COMMUNICATION

We focus a lot on the exact words we say in messages, and usually stress over sending the text and thinking "Damn, I should have said XYZ instead! That's why she didn't reply"

But when you're in a good vibe, and you've got multiple leads, texting is easier. It's because the vibe is different. And words are the result, not the source.

I often think in my messaging "Is a push required here? Is she asking arbitrary questions (ie bad girl game) Is she being a little distant? Should I tease her? Should I give a light pull?"

By focusing on the FEELING of the texting, the words become less important to me, and easier to write. Because the vibe is the message, and the words just deliver it.

Another way to look at it, text messaging subcommunicates "body language." Focus on how enthusiastic her message is, how invested she is, is she compliant or evasive, reply times (tho not always a good indicator) and you'll start to develop a 6th sense.

2. You Just Met

As my primary form of dating is through Daygame, I often have a number for a girl who i've met, and am ready to text.

I typically send the initial opening text 1.5 days later. Meet on Saturday, send Sun afternoon. If I meet on Sunday, send Monday afternoon, etc.

The exception of course, is if she's in town for only a few days, or im in town for a few days. If that's the case, I'll text 30-45 minutes after meeting her to set something up.

Some guys will text 1 hour later. I haven't noticed any difference between texting an hour later, or a day later, other than one girl I texted the next day telling me "I was worried you weren't going to text me." It sets a frame of non-needyness.

Some guys worry that a day later they'll "lose her" or she'll "lose interest." But that's never been the case for me. If the interaction wasn't good, she won't reply no matter what.

A great spike, and to make the initial text easier, L'll give the girl a nickname while number closing. "I'm going to put you in as Sam the Cheetah" (this often gets a giggle)

2.1 - OPENING TEXT

There are many different variations on the initial text that the original london daygame guys used such as:

- "Was random but cool meeting earlier Ms.Acrobat. Are you usually so friendly to strangers? ;) Mr.V"
- "Random but cool meeting you. How normal are you? ;) Mr.V"
- "Is this the slightly cute, slightly furry, cheetah girl I met earlier? Was random but cool meeting you. Mr.V"

From that I came up with a simpler variation.

- "Cool meeting you Ms.Cheetah. Mr.V"

It's short, to the point, doesn't require a response (as in, I'm not taking value), and gives her my name. If I did my job and she likes me, she'll reply. The initial text isn't the reason she isn't replying. I promise.

I sometimes might even reference our conversation, or behavior in the opener, but never as a question.

— Cool meeting you Ms. Lover of Science. Nerdy as you are... Mr.V

If she has iMessage, there's a new feature in iOS13 where you can automatically give contacts your name and photo - It's a great comfort tool, and you should enable it. Indiana Jones told me she used it to look me up, and that helped encourage her to come out. I accused her of being a stalker. She called it research. Cute.

2.1 - SHE REPLIES

It's pretty common to get simple "It was nice meeting you too!" as a reply. Getting a reply in the first place is a great sign.

I always get excited when those come in. And when they're enthusiastic, I get even more excited.

Now, we just need a little bit of conversation BEFORE sending a date invite. I find it a bit too rushed if you go directly for the date invite, other coaches may disagree, but I'm not a coach, I'm just a dude who's putting in a lot of work.

Plus, again, texting is apart of the modern dating process - Get used to it!

2.2 - LONG LEAD TIMES

It's not uncommon that the girl you just met is leaving for a trip, and won't be back for a while. Typically I'll ping every 4 days or so, and try to keep the conversation going. Or I'll ping in 4 days, then my follow up ping 4 days later will be about her returning.

Unfortunately, the longer between when you meet to when you see her the higher chance you won't be able to get her out.

2.3 - SHORT LEAD TIMES

If you or the girl is in town for just a few days, I'll typically text her 30-45 minutes after meeting her.

My next message will be the date invite, and take it from there. I break most rules around time delays simply because you've got one shot if she isn't coming back any time soon.

3. Your Next Message

Once the opening text is sent, you'll get a variation on replies, but pretty often you see "Nice meeting you too!"

I either:

1. Wait a few hours, or a day, and send a ping
2. Reply based on what she says, and keep to that topic.

Avoid bouncing around from one topic to the next so quickly. Conversations will typically change with a natural progression.

3. Date Invites

After about 3-5 messages between us, I'll send an invite. I avoid long text conversations, and try to get to the point pretty quickly. Strike while the iron's hot!

My date invites are made up of three pieces:

- The Invite
- Day
- Place and Time

The invite and day are usually in the first message, and the place and time is in the next message.

I only send out a date invite 2-3 days out. You can suggest a day a week in advanced, but you'll have to do more work by pinging her in 2 days to keep the fire warm.

For first dates, I'll only do Sunday through Thursday. In NYC, Friday and Saturday nights are highly coveted days to make plans.

Let's grab a drink this week. I can do Tues or Wed

Let's do Tuesday. Do you live in the city?

Or are you still [REDACTED]

Meet me here at 7pm

Google Maps
goo.gl

You got it.

3.1 - THE INVITE

I try my best to tie the conversation into the invite, so that it's a smooth transition.

- "I'll tell u what I dressed as over a drink..."
- "I'll tell u what I asked Santa for over a drink..."
- "Tell me about XYZ over a drink..."

If I can't tie it into anything, i'll wait about an hour or two and just cut the thread. It may feel a bit awkward, but again, it's a strong frame.

- "Let's grab a drink..."
- "Come get a drink with me..."

I never say "We should" because it isn't commanding enough. We should do a lot of things, but are we going to? Make it happen!

3.2 - DAYS

For my first invite, I always give 2 day suggestions. It makes it easier and less needy than having to immediately follow up with another invite if they can't do that day. Put em together and save yourself the headaches.

- "...I can do Mon or Wed"
- "...I can do Tues or Thurs"

She can pick which one works best for her. 90% of the time, for girls who are interested, they'll pick one. Rarely are they busy on both days, but it's possible.

If she denies my first invite , my follow up invite will only include 1 day.

Don't ask:

- "...What's your schedule like?"
- "...What your week look like?"
- "...Are you busy next week?"

Who cares what her schedule is like? Just give her two days that work for YOU, and let her pick one.

It's a bonus when they pick the first day you suggest, but nothing to worry about if they choose the second.

3.3 - PLACE & TIME

Once she confirms, i'll send

- "Meet me at XYZ at 7"
- "Let's meet at XYZ at 7"

I never say "See you..." or "I'll meet you" Much stronger that she is meeting YOU, and entering YOUR world.

In total, that looks like this:

- You: "Let's grab a drink. I can do Tues or Thurs"
- Her: "Tues works for me"
- You: "Meet me at XYZ a 7pm"

Another way to do it, is to spread it out over even more messages.

- You: "Let's get drinks. I can do Sun or Tues"
- Her: "Tues works. Where?"
- You: "I know a great wine bar in the east village"
- Her: "What's it called?"
- You: "XYZ Wine Bar"
- Her: "Never been there before"
- You: "Meet me there at 7pm"
- Her: "Ok. See you then!"

3.4 NEVER CONFIRM THE CONFIRMATION!

This is typical nice guy behavior. Once she confirms the details, that's it. Your work is done.

- You: "Lets grab a drink. I can do Tues or Thurs"

Her: "Thurs sounds good"
You: "Cool. Meet me at XYZ at 7"
Her: "Okie dokie"
You: "See you then"

Why send this? You don't need to do this and you'll come across MUCH stronger with her being the last person to send a message, especially when you text her the day of the date.

- You: "Let's do Thurs at XYZ. Meet me at 7"
Her: "Deal!"
You: "See you then"

Again, why? You don't need to do this. She already confirmed.

Vacuum. Create tension. Develop strong frame behavior.

Nice guys will often feel the tension of not sending this confirmation confirmation, but don't fall into this behavior. The date is already 100% confirmed, and if you need to follow up, you're in double text zone.

3.5 SHE DIDN'T CONFIRM THE DATE

Unfortunately, it's not always smooth sailing. Some girls will text back and forth, and as soon as you send the invite they disappear. The biggest reason is that they just like the attention. Not every set can be won.

This is why I keep my texting to 3 or 4 messages each to not waste my time.

Some girls will shit test you, and make you sweat by waiting a few hours to reply to your invite. As soon as you send the invite it's her turn to reply.

I stick to the 2 days I suggest, even if a girl says she can meet another day close to those days. It will seem weak if you say you can do Mon or Wed, she replies with Tues instead, and you agree. You can get back to her, but I typically shoot for another day.

- YOU: "...I can do Mon or Wed"
- HER: "I can't do those days. Tues and Thurs are better for me."
- YOU: "Let's do later in the week. Sun at 7pm"

It often happens with flakey girls, but when I send out my two days, I might not hear from her. So let's say it's Monday, I send out the invite for Thurs or Sun. If I don't hear from her by Wed eve, I'll send:

- "Sorry, can't do Thurs anymore. Sun still works"

The reasoning behind this is to show that you don't just wait around. You've made other plans, and it's her loss that she took too long to get back to you. While it may not turn into anything, it's still nice to maintain your frame there.

When you do hear back, keep an eye out for anything other than a solid confirmation. I call these “pre-cancellation” texts. The vibe and body language from these messages can indicate hesitancy on her part, but not always. Any variation on the following from her is typically a bad sign:

- Her: "Tues should/could/might work"
You should reply: "Cool. Let me know by X Day."
- Her: "I'm not sure yet, can I get back to you?"
You should reply: "Let me know by X Day."
- Her: "I can't. Maybe Mon?"
You should reply: "I'll get back to you."
- Her: "I would love to but my week is so busy!"
I wouldn't reply to that since she didn't suggest another day. Roll off, and maybe ping in a few days.

If she can't do either day, but is interested, she'll suggest another day. If she suggests a day that's a week or more out, I'll initially reply with

- "I'll get back to you"
Never "Let me get back to you"

In a few days, usually 2 or 3 days before her suggested date, I'll send

- "That works for me. Meet me at XYZ at 7pm"
You can also suggest the day before or after her suggestion if you want.

I've had girls deny both dates without alternatives, at which point I'll either just not reply and ping in a few days, or reply with:

- "We'll figure something out another time"
With no date or time. Then ping in 3-4 days, and invite after another few messages.

If she's denied both dates without suggesting alternatives, roll off, send a ping, text a bit, then send another invite. If she STILL can't meet, stop texting her. The girl in the screenshot above I stopped texting.

Maybe ping her again in a few weeks if you really liked her, but again, it's a bad sign, and you don't want to keep rolling off and pinging because you're just going to be her text buddy. If a girl denies my second opportunity for a date invite, I will stop messaging her completely.

It'll take time, but you'll feel when a girl is a good lead. And you can compare your experience with girls who are interested, vs girls who aren't and you'll notice their communication style (time + enthusiasm) with texting will vastly differ.

3.6 - IT'S OKAY TO BE PERSISTENT

Some times girls will just shit test the shit out of you. Here's a great example of when the girl was shit testing me, being difficult, I didn't act butt hurt and got her to come out that night! Some guys might have "next" her and say she isn't interested. The obstacle is the way. And it paid off 2 dates later.

4.0 Day of Date

I'll typically send one of two messages on the day of.

1. "Running a few behind"

I would send this 30 minutes before the date. If she doesn't reply, super likely she's flaking.

2. "See you tonight. Look good...So we match ;)"
If I haven't texted her in 2-3 days i'll send this around 1pm - Think I stole this from Torero

If she replies, it's on. If she doesn't reply, it's a very high chance of a flake. Every girl I've ever gone on a date with, who I've sent this message to, replied. Some more cutesy than others!

Never under any circumstance send

- "Are we still on for tonight?"

This is a very strong opinion of mine, but my feeling with NOT sending this is that you haven't assumed the close. It could be cultural as a New Yorker in America, so keep that in-mind.

4.1 - SHE'S ON HER WAY

Sometimes she might send something like

- "I'm on my way"
- "Heading over now"
- "See you in just a bit"

My typical reply is just "Cool" or "Got it." I never say "See you soon!" or "Can't wait!" or "Awesome" or anything Nice Guy. Just acknowledge her message.

4.1 - SHE'S RUNNING LATE

If she tells you she's running a few minutes behind, you can say nothing if you've already talked that day, or "Cool" if you detect she's trying to confirm it's still on if you haven't spoken.

If she tells you she's running 10+ minutes behind, I'll send a push.

- "-5 points"
- "Ur my arch nemesis now 🤦"
- "And I was just starting to like you 😊"
- "😱"

Avoid the nice guy tendency of:

- "No problem"
It's not a problem she's running late?
- "Sounds good"
It sounds good she's running late?
- "See you soon"
You're going to ignore she's running late?"

If a girl tells me she's running an hour late, and she's really sorry about it, I might reply

- "Sounds like the first drink is on you ;)"

If she just says she's running an hour or more late, but doesn't give much of a reason why, or acting kind of flakey, depending on how I feel, I might just reschedule it.

- "Let's reschedule for another day"

Side note: I had a girl tell me she was running late 15 minutes. I stupidly just said "See you in a bit." 30 minutes later she texts me "heading out now. 30 min away." She hadn't even left her house and it was 15 minutes AFTER we were suppose to meet. I felt disrespected, it put me in a terrible mood, and I should have rescheduled. Live and learn.

4.2 - SHE CANCELS

This is the most infuriating and heart breaking message to get. It's tough, but it can also be a shit test to see how you react. Most guys get extremely emotional. Don't let her see it.

Girls will often use cute emojis to "soften" the blow" but see past what she's doing. She's trying to prevent you from reacting poorly. Don't confuse this with her being truthful.

I try to give one pull, before abandoning hope of getting her out that night. I want to show some persistence, but not over do it.

- HER: "Don't hate me! But I'm not feeling well, Im gonna stay in tonight"
YOU: "Come for just one drink. It'll make you feel better"
HER: "I'm sorry, I wish I could. Maybe another time?"
- HER: "I don't think I'll be able to make it tonight 😞😔"
YOU: "Why, what's up"
HER: "I have a ton of papers to catch up on I didn't do 😊 Im sorry!!"

After that, I won't reply. I'll ping in a few days, try to get a small convo, and try to re-invite out.

I also never send " It feels too nice guy. Ignoring her message is stronger, but if not I'll send "

If she gives some reason like being too stressed, or sick, needs to study, or whatever it may be, I never send a ping about it. This goes back to the possibility that she's lying, and if she is, it really hurts your frame. You also come across too nice. Why be "nice" to someone who just cancelled on you. It's disrespectful.

Remember, no empathy:

- HER: "I'm really not feeling well, I don't think I can make it on Sunday"

DONT: "Ok feel better"
DONT: "When you're better we'll get a drink"
DONT: "You right now" (GIF of a person sneezing)

DO: "Let's reschedule for Tuesday"

Don't immediately "next" her. If she suggests another day, tell her you'll get back to her. I've had girls cancel on first dates, but then come out later. It's not often, but it does happen, and you should play it cool either way. Women are emotional, and by being so quick to "next" her, you're acting like an emotional woman. Are you PMS'ing, too??

5. Post Date

Because I use the Magnum First Date Model, I typically get messages from the girls after the dates. It's not terrible if you don't. If I don't, I typically wait 1.5 days to send a Ping.

If the date is Mon night, I'll send the ping Wed afternoon.

Once you Ping, get the convo going, send 4-5 messages back and forth, then invite, and repeat!

6. My Final Remarks

Getting into a good texting flow will take some time, but hopefully the guidelines I've presented here will help you get there quickly. Try as much as possible to FEEL the energy and "body language" of the texts. This will help the words come out more easily.

Women can be unpredictable. It's not always your fault for why she doesn't reply, or cancels. Be strong. Expect uncertainty.

And under no circumstance become a loser, who thinks, that unless a girl treats him like Brad Pitt, she isn't worth pursuing.

Girls live in the land of the maybe.

(h/t to Nash)

Good luck fellas. Don't let me down.

V

@MrVDaygame

© Copyright 2020 Mr.V Daygame